

The PBS LearningMedia Master Teachers Program (formerly Digital Integrators)

Opportunity for Math teachers (grades 3-8 only)

PBS LearningMedia is an innovative, free digital media service that harnesses the power of public media to support curriculum-based teaching and learning from preK-12. WNET (Channel 13) is the flagship public media station of the New York City tri-state area and the most-watched public television channel in the nation. Recognizing the vast potential for our broadcast programming to become powerful learning resources, WNET's Education Department creates rich media experiences that engage students and teachers in exploring curriculum concepts. These resources, along with thousands of other curriculum and professional development resources, are available at no cost to educators through PBS LearningMedia (www.pbslearningmedia.org).

Discover, use, and share best practices for using digital media (video, audio, images, and interactives) in the math classroom through participation in the PBS LearningMedia Master Teachers Program. Media Master teachers have significant experience using digital media to enrich and enhance learning with students, and support their colleagues in the effective integration of digital media into teaching.

The goal of the program is to create a community of New York City educators savvy in the use of digital media who offer their ed tech insights to each other, and to classroom teachers across the city and beyond. We are recruiting a select number of New York City math teachers from grades 3-8 to participate in this exclusive community we call "PBS LearningMedia Master Teachers."
